1 Stooge Dirt Tracker £720

A rigid steel MTB with bikepacking braze-ons and plus tyres, a bit like the Jones Plus LWB. Some nice touches but only one size (18in). Price is for the frameset, not the bike.

2 BMB RR Stem $400

As a higher handlebar fan, this Raised (150mm) Reversed (-15mm) stem intrigued me. Intended for enduro, it could have wider application. That price, though! bemorebikes.com

3 Van Rysel In'Ride 100 home trainer £99.99

Smart trainers are all the rage but an inexpensive, magnetic resistance model like this can do just as much for your off-season fitness. Don't forget your discount (p14)! deathlon.co.uk

4 Pirelli P Zero SmartUBE Evo £36.99

Not riding tubeless? Pirelli has launched a range of TPU tubes – including this 38g 700×25-28C one, which promises lower rolling resistance and a 50% smaller pack size. pirelli.com

5 Restrap Utility Hip Pack £94.99

Launched too late for our hip packs test last year, Restrap's 6-litre waterproof bag doubles as a bar bag. Each mesh side pocket can hold bidon-sized loads. restrap.com

6 Garmin HRM-Fit £139.99

Garmin's new heart rate monitor clips to the bottom band of a sports bra. It's a neat idea with a premium price; Garmin's HRM-Dual strap is only £59.99.

7 Asgard Gladiator Bike Shed × 14 £2,760

Bike bunkers are great for the garage-less but tend to hold only two or three bikes. This sturdy 7×18ft metal shed stores up to 14 and doubles as a workshop. asgardsss.co.uk
